Magic Mile - 1st chairlift in Oregon

"Skiers Live a Long Time" - article by Henry Bendinelli, Mt. Hood Skikats club president

Henry Bendinelli

Timberline's "Sky Lift" on the Magic Mile. Capacity: 300 skiers per hour.

This was the second lift built in the world---by Triplett, (if memory serves me right.) The first was built and designed by engineer Jimmy Collins of the Union Pacific RR, being converted from a banana conveyer. Jimmy replaced the original banana hooks with chairs (good move!) and the lift was installed on Dollar Mountain in Sun Valley.

Would you believe Henry Bendinelli worked as a loader on this lift? About 1940. Then he graduated upwards to selling tickets, at 35 CENTS per ride. Moreover, he balanced to the penny every day! Whee!

Many years ago, Hjalmar informed me "Skiers live a lo-o-o-ng time" and he was so right. Hjalmar skied until age 93.

Every day you ski adds a day onto your lifetime, so go ahead and buy that season pass. You'll be jumping on and off chairlifts, having a BLAST in our gloriuos sport of skiing, while those Couch-Potato acquaintences are pushing wheelchairs around, ---or underneath pushing-up the daisies.

Your Friend, Henry

PS: Next time you take a spill, say a word of thanks to Hjalmar Hvam. He did a tremendous favor for all skiers--and you--. Hjalmar invented the release binding.

Then, fill-in your sitzmark. (Editor's note: This means fill in the hole your ass created in the snow! The German word "sitz" literally means "seat".)
